Setting up stalls in and around college campuses constitutes a crucial element of our comprehensive outreach strategy, amplifying our ability to advance our mission in multifaceted ways. These stalls serve as dynamic platforms, casting a spotlight not only on our diverse projects and products but also on the vital social causes we wholeheartedly support.

In terms of community outreach, these stalls are instrumental. By engaging directly with students from various colleges, we connect with potential future change-makers. These interactions become channels for sharing our mission and discussing pressing social issues, effectively motivating and empowering young minds to become driving forces behind positive societal transformation under our banner.

Moreover, these stalls function as central hubs, providing a comprehensive overview of our ongoing initiatives. They significantly amplify the reach and popularity of our projects within the community. By showcasing our projects prominently, we are able to mobilize support and foster engagement among those who come into contact with our stalls.

These stalls, while promoting our initiatives, serve as engaging platforms for potential change-makers and centralize the visibility of our projects. Through these initiatives, we actively advance our social causes and cultivate a sense of community among all who encounter our outreach efforts. With this multifaceted approach, we are committed to making a lasting impact and driving positive change.

Organizing marketing campaigns on special occasions like International Women's Day and International Happiness Day has proven to be a potent strategy for creating a lasting social impact and spreading awareness about our community upliftment projects. These campaigns are designed to engage a diverse audience, reaching students and faculty within the college, the broader local community, and online followers.

Likewise, our International Happiness Day campaign took a hands-on approach by paying a visit to the Khushiyaan NGO. This visit allowed us to directly impact underprivileged communities, spreading joy and support while highlighting our dedication to community upliftment. Our engagement with Khushiyaan NGO served as a vivid example of how marketing campaigns can translate into tangible, positive change for those in need.

By addressing critical social issues like health, sanitation, and gender inequality through these campaigns, we aim to raise awareness and educate and inspire individuals to actively support our cause. Furthermore, these campaigns embody and promote values such as gender equality and happiness, attracting like-minded individuals and fostering a sense of community. Over time, these efforts can lead to lasting change, inspiring ongoing support and potential collaborations with other organizations and stakeholders who share our mission.

Teacher's Day

A Teachers Day Campaign was organised at Project Abyaan's Sewa Bharti Community in Rohini, New Delhi. The campaign was inspired by the idea of the 'Importance of role models' in our lives. The community members were given flowers and badges, and a card-making session was held after it.

Men's Day

To celebrate men, our team invited people to mention the man in their life who inspires them the most. Other than that, to break the stereotypes, our team conceptualized the campaign 'They are men and they too can.' The idea was to help create a safe space for men.

Children's Day Campaign

For Children's Day, our team aimed at uniting the crowd with their younger selves. For the offline campaign, participants were asked to write down their names and the advice they would give to their younger selves. Lollipops were also distributed to the crowd as a marker of childhood and playfulness.

International Women's Day

Our team planned offline campaigns for Women's Day titled 'That's what she said' and 'I am a woman on a mission to.' The campaigns highlighted inspiring women in our lives and their words that encourage us daily.

Happiness Day

For Happiness Day, our team visited the Khushiyaan Foundation and interacted with the children, the epitome of happiness, there. They made delightful cards for their loved ones and danced with joy in the end.
